The screenshot shows an article titled "Scotgen EfW environmental permit under review again" under the "COMPLIANCE" category. The article is by Isabella Kaminski, dated 16 August 2013. The text discusses the Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA) reviewing the environmental permit of a troubled energy-from-waste plant in Dargavel, near Dumfries. It mentions that the plant was closed on 18 July after a fire, and that SEPA threatened to revoke its permit unless it completed commissioning by 30 June. The article also notes that the company operating the plant, Scotgen (Dumfries) Ltd, was required to set up adequate financial provisions after its parent company, Ascot Environmental Ltd, went into administration. Further details include a spike in reported incidents in April 2013, the plant's export of electricity to the grid, and the requirements for the July fire. The article concludes with SEPA's enforcement options and the company's assessment of the damage.

Callout boxes highlight the following features:

- Share this article: A box containing social media sharing icons for Twitter, Facebook, LinkedIn, and a generic share icon.
- Follow Up: A box containing a link to "Scotgen (Dumfries) Ltd Dargavel energy from waste facility: Site status report v12".

The screenshot displays the website for the ENDS Report print edition. At the top, a navigation bar includes links for Analysis, Reports, Documents, Webinars, Bulletins, Directory, Events, Job-search, and Print Edition. The main heading is "ENDS Report Issue 475, September 2014", with a sub-header: "Intelligence for environmental professionals. Britain's leading green business journal and website. Subscribe".

The main content area is divided into three sections:

- Comment:
 - Defensive measures
 - Clarifying landlords' liability for nuisance
 - Community energy needs EU law boost
- Politics:
 - National parks opened up for shale gas exploration
 - Cash incentives for nuclear waste hosts
 - MPs back IPCC findings on global warming
 - Climate change included in draft SDGs
 - Wales acts on sustainable development
 - Labour to fight flooding and air pollution
 - Charity takes over derelict Scottish mines
 - Renewables supply 15% of UK electricity, DECC figures show
 - Third of UK nuclear capacity offline for maintenance
 - SEPA chief executive to stand down next year
- Business:
 - Government's electricity market reforms get EU state aid approval
 - Centrica dumps Celtic Array
 - Drax loses biomass legal challenge
 - Biomass can deliver 'real carbon savings'
 - Viridor rises up waste company rankings
 - Poor recycling hinders circular economy

To the right of the main content is a "Browse Print Editions" sidebar with a "Year" dropdown menu set to "2014" and a "Go" button. Below this is a list of issues from 466 (December 2013) to 475 (September 2014). A green line connects the "Go" button to the text "Browse Back Issues" at the bottom right of the page.

On the far right, there are two additional sections:

- ENDSEurope: "Europe's environmental news service, delivering essential updates on EU green policy-making and legislative developments. FREE ACCESS for a trial period"
- Email Bulletins: "Keep up to date by email with our free news bulletins". It lists various newsletters like "ENDS Report morning headlines" and "Sustainability weekly", with a "Sign Up" button and a "Follow us on Twitter" link.
